Encouraging reflection

I have used ePortfolio to encourage reflective writing and reflective practice. Firstly by looking at some of the tools that are available on ePortfolio, such as the blog, and you can also ask students to use pro-formas which are produced, some of them, by the professional body which are maybe critical incident reports which the students can upload.

The web folio can be used for presenting reflective writing and from this the students can make links to the tools within ePortfolio, such as the blog, which could be a diary format, or some of the pro-formas that I mentioned, or the swot analysis. So that allows them then to use that information as evidence within their reflective writing.
